EXPLANATORY NOTE

(This note is not part of these Regulations and does not purport to be a legal interpretation.)

These Regulations, made pursuant to the European Communities Act, 1972, amend and extend certain provisions of the Trade Marks Act 1996 to give statutory effect in the State to Directive (EU) 2015/2436 of the European Parliament and of the Council of 16 December 2015 amending Directive 2008/95/EC relating to trade marks and to certain provisions of Council Regulation (EU) 2017/1001 of 14 June 2017, on the European Union Trade Mark.

As there is currently a prescribed legislative framework in place for trade marks, namely, the Trade Marks Act 1996, the transposition of the Directive into Irish law will necessitate the introduction of new, modernizing provisions and the revision of certain existing Irish provisions.

In terms of new provisions, the transposition provides for the opportunity to register non-traditional forms of trade marks in the future; introduces a new act of infringement relating to the affixing of a trade mark to packaging, labels, tags etc. or the offering, placing on the market etc. of such items; introduces new provisions relating to the use of trade marks; introduces intervening rights of trade mark proprietors in infringement proceedings; provides a proprietor with certain rights against a publisher where the reproduction of trade marks in dictionaries gives the impression that it is a generic name for the goods or services; introduces new procedures whereby, subject to the provisions of the license, a licensee may bring proceedings for infringement of the trade mark only with the consent of the proprietor; introduces provisions regarding the division of trade mark registrations and introduces new non-use defence mechanisms in opposition, invalidity and infringement proceedings.

With regard to the revision of certain existing Irish provisions, the transposition amends those relating to the grounds for refusal or invalidity of a trade mark; amends the rights conferred by a trade mark, particularly in relation to (a) strengthening trade mark protection and combatting counterfeiting more effectively, by conferring a right on a proprietor to prevent third parties from bringing infringing goods into Ireland, without being released for free circulation, (b) the use of a trade mark as a trade or company name, (c) the use of a trade mark in comparative advertising; amends the conditions of registration of a collective trade mark; amends the grounds for revocation of a collective mark; clarifies the classification of goods and services; amends provisions regarding renewal and expiry of the registration of trade marks; defines whom may file observations in relation to the registration of a trade mark; amends certain opposition procedures, and removes the possibility of opposing the registration of a trade mark on absolute grounds.
